

Wild Heart

Words & Music by Jan Garrett & Karen Drucker

(Inspired by Brené Brown and her book, Braving the Wilderness, used by permission)

We are man & woman, we are black & white
We're the spaces in-between us, we are wrong & right
We are so much more than what we can see
And we're following our longing

We are tough and tender, we are brave and afraid
We are scared and excited, we are grit and grace
We are standing together, we are standing alone
And we're searching for belonging

Strong back, soft front, we are walking the wilderness
Strong back, soft front, wild heart
I find myself living in that high lonesome sound
Trying to fit in, In the middle of a crowd
I'm a solitary dreamer, on the outside looking in
And I'm following my longing

Well, it takes a lotta courage to finally leave home
And go out beyond the boundaries of the safety we've known
But we take our take better angels wherever we go
When we're searching for belonging

Strong back, soft front, we are walking the wilderness
Strong back, soft front, wild heart

Well, I hope that I can learn what it takes to be brave
And offer to you the connection I crave
'Cause when I stand in my soul, I can give you my song
And I know that that's my True Belonging

Strong back, soft front, we are walking the wilderness
Strong back, soft front, wild heart

Strong back, soft front, we are walking the wilderness
Strong back, soft front, wild heart.....Wild Heart
