

What Matters in the End

Words & Music by Jan Garrett, JD Martin, & Lisa Firestone

Let's face it, my friend, nobody lives forever
We come and go like a song in the wind
It's all the love we share
And the time we spend together
It's all that anybody remembers in the end

It's what you built, not what you bought
It's what you gave, not what you got
It's what you learned, and how you taught
That matters in the end.

Not who you knew, but who you touched
Even the small things mean so much
It's when you lift somebody up and make a friend
That matters in the end

I wake up, again, today is a new beginning
And I'm lifted up by the song in the wind
This life is a sweet surprise
Might as well rise up singing
One more chance to come round again

It's what you built, not what you bought
It's what you gave, not what you got
It's what you learned, and how you taught
That matters in the end.

Not who you knew, but who you touched
Even the small things mean so much
It's when you lift somebody up and make a friend
That matters in the end

What will we do with our wild & precious life
Hanging in the balance, with our souls on fire

Not who you know, but who you touch
Even the small things mean so much
It's when you lift somebody up and make a friend
That matters in the end
